Chinese Loan Question. It has transpired that when there seemed some danger of negotiations with the Quintuple Group falling through the Government, in its dire need of money, granted no option for a loan of £3,000,000 sterling (issue price 94, interest 6 per cent.) to a Belgian Syndicate, and also arranged for a loan for £1,500,000 with an Austrian firm in connection with purchases of armaments. Its right to take these steps is admitted to be unquestioned, but before the actual signature of the contract with the Quintuple Group it was necessary to communicate these facts to the Bankers. The latter, after a personal conference with the Minister of Finance, adopted the view that the Chinese Government was perfeetly entitled to act as it had done, hafore resuming negotiations with the Quintuple Group. The Legations concerned did not so readily acquiesce in this view, but eventually withdrew their objections and authorized the Bankers to sign the loan contract. The Kuoming-tang ere now protesting against the Austrian Loan "owing to its unfavourable terms"; meaning, presumably, terms less favourable than those of the Quintuple Loan. The adverse comment on this loan put the Big Loan before the people in a new light and facilitates the measures which are now being taken to secure its ratification by Parlia-

China Mail.

The Battleship Type:

"What controls the development of the battleship typ?" was the question that Mr Alan H. Burgoyne, M.P., and a great authority on naval affairs endeavouted to answer in his paper read at the Institution of Naval Architects. The question, he said is open to a variety of answers, but accepting the axiom that a warship is solely a means of bringcontact with the enemy; or (by reason of their existence) preventing the outbreak of bostilities, we may rapidly extend our argumentaled The adestructive stactor (gun, torpedo, &c., as the case may be) is, therefore, the primary basis. "Subsidiary "to it we find Tel. 634 the defensive factor, and thence enter the realms of strategy and invoke discussion on the value of speed as a strategical or tactical. asset. These three desiderata have each their claims, to the equable establishment of which lit is essential to bring into line the views both of the naval architect and the naval officer-a problem of abiding complexity.

New Russian Railway. Harbin, May 6 .- The Russian papers are informed that the Russian Government has finally decided to construct the Kiachta-Verkneudinsk railway line at government expense instead of giving the enterprise into private hands. This action is being taken owing to the importance of the new line which will develop commercial relations with Mongolia. The Council of Ministers has presented the Duma with a Bil to the above effect.

FOOTBALL'S LOW TONE.

We have it upon the authority of one of the Football Association councillor-journalists that Selection Committee some time ago passed a resolution that no player chosen for the Welsh international game should be let off unless for a Cup tie replay. It would be interesting to know how this singular resolution, which merely reaffirms the existing rule, came to be passed, says "Spectator" in the "Daily Mail."

Is it the fact, as stated in certain newspapers, that professional players are disposed to hold international caps cheaply in the absence of any monétary payment of a size proportionate to the importance of the occasion? If we have come to this pass it might suggest itself to the Selection Committee that instead of forcing unwilling or professionals honour, they might draw largely upon their amateur talent, as they used to do for this game not so many years ago.

As it happened, Holley, the Sunderland forward chosen for inside-left, was required by his club for a Cup-tie replay, and Sunderland and Newcastle United their opponents, joined in a quite thanked. superfluous appeal to the Selection Committee to excuse him.

This action of Newcastle's and one or two instances of excretaries of clubs wishing success to teams which have besten them in the Cup competition have formed pretexts for paragraphs about the tone" of football not being so 'low" as I have made out, and so forth. I do not wish to deprecate any, action that savours of sportsmanship in Football Association football, but we must have far more substantial evidence football than the occasional disshall no longer mark them. Reinstated Professionals. It has long been the fashion to defend these "reinstatement" of professionals in a class of football to which they never belonged, except in a few instances, as a mere act of justice to men who wish to be able to give the game the benefit of their experience in the capacities of club directors or county committee men. There are, as we all know, a few exprofessionals who have taken up such duties, and in the control of professional clubs at least they have done good service; but why they should be regarded as specially qualified to act on bodies which supervise both amateur and professional football is not too apparent, and one does not wonder that amateurs are inclined to be restive in such circum stances. But there have been cases in which the actual re ult of the "reinstatement" of professionals has been to strengthen the playing forces of certain clubs with designs upon the Footbal Association's Amateur Cup. In future there should be no suspicion that this trophy has been won by men who years ago used to be described as "shamateurs," and that is a step towards improving the tone of football for which the Football Association must be

NIGHT POLICE COURT

A Suggestion for London.

According to a statement in Labour contemporary Miss Beat rice Harraden, the novelist, propose to inaugrate a movement for the establishment of a night police-court in London, says the "Pall Mall Gazette." Harraden is said to have studied social conditions in the United States, and particularly, to have been impressed by a visit to a night court in New York.

Inquires made in various official quarters, however, do not tend to favour such a scheme. It is pointed out, in the first place, that American police court administration differs widely from the British system, and the methods of the policeman are cited as contrasting violently if some are sneering and others with those of his confreres on this

THE DESIRE FOR PEACE.

Despite the spirit of unrest which is manifest in Europe, and notwithstanding the feverish naval and military activity displayed ling in towns; in fact, while the fax is a brother of Mr. E. It will be recalled that when Mr. Winston Churchill introduced his naval Estimates recently, he threw out the hint of a "naval sacrifice which Germany has to holiday" extending over one year, his remarks obviously being directed especially to Germany. One of the leading Berlin papers now follows this up with an assertion, based on information secured from a "special source," that on the conclusion of the Balkan hostilities the British Government intends making definite proposals to Germany to rest from naval construction for the year 1914-15. In fact, it is suggested that Mr. Churchill himself may be sent to Berlin to personally explain his scheme to the German Navy experts.
